Australian Social Cohesion Survey, 2010

Overview

Type	Australian Social Cohesion Survey

Abstract
The Social Cohesion Survey is a series of detailed surveys on social cohesion, immigration and population issues. A prime objective of the surveys is to further understanding of the social impact of Australia's increasingly diverse immigration program. The series of surveys forms part of the Scanlon Foundation Social Cohesion Research Program (SCRP) which commenced in 2007 under the direction of the Monash Institute for the Study of Global Movements (MISGM) and the Australian Multicultural Foundation (AMF). A key element of the SCRP was the conduct of a landmark Australian Social Cohesion Survey in 2007.

This is the third study in the Social Cohesion Survey series, wtih the aims:
• To look at the Australian community's attitudes towards social cohesion, and
• To assess changes in these attitudes over time.

The 2010 survey used a randomly sampled 2,000 respondents with the sample stratified geographically. A minimum of 200 interviews was undertaken in each Australian state / territory (i.e. 1,600 interviews) with the remaining 400 interviews allocated across the five most populous states (i.e. NSW, Victoria, Queensland, WA and SA) in proportion to the population in those states. The study covered a variety of topics, including economic conditions, political participation, socio-cultural attitudes, discrimination, local communities and future growth.

Sampling

Sampling Procedure
One-stage stratified or systematic random sample

Response Rate
The response rate was defined as interviews as a proportion of interviews plus refusals. On this basis the final overall response rate for the 2010 survey was 51%.

Weighting
A “rim weighting” approach was used to adjust for differential survey response rates across age, gender and educational attainment and, where necessary, to also adjust for disproportionate aspects of the sample design (e.g.: disproportionate geographic distribution). Where possible, proportions were taken from the 2009 ABS population statistics rather than the 2006 data used in the previous surveys. “Rim weighting” was used to create weights which adjusted the data in-line with Australian Bureau of Statistics counts on these variables. The weights are created using a statistical regression approach which seeks to achieve the “best fit” possible with the population proportions specified by the weighting variables while disturbing the overall data as little as possible. The algorithm used for this purpose was provided in the Social Research Centre’s Quantum analysis software to develop sample weights which incorporate the variables state, age, gender, country of birth and educational attainment.

Supervision
In addition to providing a 1800 number, offering to send an introductory letter and arranging for interviews in the agreed languages, the other response maximisation procedures that applied to the project included:
• Referring sample members to the Monash University number on an “as required” basis;
• Hosting a web-page containing responses to frequently asked questions on the Study for Global Movements (Monash University) website; and
• Ensuring appropriately trained interviewers worked on the survey (see Section 4.2 of the Technical Report).

Data Processing & Appraisal

Data Editing
The data were checked by the archive for missing variable and value labels, out of range values and wild codes, logical inconsistencies, and confidentiality.

Other Processing
The 2010 Survey was a repeat of the 2007 National Benchmarking Survey and used a random sampling methodology stratified by geographic location. The sample was stratified by state / territory, with a minimum quota of 200 interviews per state / territory to be achieved (i.e. a sub-total of 1,600 interviews). The remaining 400 interviews were allocated across the five most populous states (NSW, Vic, Qld, WA and SA) on a probability proportional to size basis. The interviews in each state were allocated to Capital City / Rest of State in proportion to the population. This approach ensured that the final sample composition was geographically representative of the Australian adult population while, at the same time, ensuring a sufficiently large sample in each state/territory to support analysis at that level. The sample for the survey was generated using the company Sampleworx and their generation of random digit dialling (RDD).
